The politics of Uganda

Uganda's politics is characterized by a presidential system, where the president serves both the head of state and government. The country has a multi-party system, but the National Resistance Movement (NRM) has dominated the political landscape since 1986. President Yoweri Museveni, the current head, has been in power for over three decades.

The Ugandan parliament is unicameral, consisting of the National Assembly with 529 members. Elections are held every five years, with the most recent ones sparking debates on electoral fairness and opposition participation. Key issues include governance, corruption and economic development.

Civil society and opposition parties play a crucial role in advocating for reforms and accountability. As Uganda navigates its political path, challenges like youth engagement and service delivery remain central to its democratic process.
